RISING TIDE

What We can Learn from the Dutch and their Relationship with Water

The Rising Tide program explores the Dutch and their uneasy relationship with water, as well what New Jersey can learn from their experience in the wake of Hurricane Sandy. In addition, the program addresses related themes such the Dutch historical legacy in New Jersey and New York, and the history of our understanding of the sea and natural disasters from a local and global perspective.

Additional support has been provided by The Netherlands Consulate General in New York, Montclair Public Library, Montclair Historical Society, Greener Bloomfield, Montclair Environmental Commission, the MSU PSEG Institute for Sustainability Studies, Jacob Leisler Institute and Montclair TV34.
